

The Institute of Ismaili Studies

Word Count Range and Marking of Over-length Coursework Policy

This policy relates to taught students and regulations must be read in conjunction with the Taught Degree Regulations.

Contents

1. Scope of the policy	1
2. Word limits.....	1
3. Provision of a word count	2
4. Definition of word count and word range.....	2
5. Special provisions.....	3
6. Penalties for over-length coursework.....	3
7. Resubmission of coursework that has been subject to a penalty for being over-length and late.....	4
8. Coursework subject to a penalty for being over-length and late	4

1. Scope of the policy

The policy set out in this regulation covers modules assessed wholly or partly by coursework. It covers coursework of all sorts, including essays, extended essays, reports, independent study projects and dissertations.

2. Word limits

The word limit prescribed for each piece of assessed coursework is a maximum. Assessments are designed to enable students to achieve excellent marks without writing to the limit. There is consequently no specific penalty for work that is under-length. Under-length work is dealt with by the normal provisions of the marking scheme.

The Institute of Ismaili Studies

3. Provision of a word count

Students must provide an accurate word count on their assignment for all coursework submitted for assessment. As such, the recommendation is that Microsoft Word is used to determine the word count. Examiners will normally give students the benefit of the doubt and will regard small undeclared over-runs as genuine errors of calculation, but significant inaccuracies in declared word counts will be treated as an offence under the Academic Misconduct Policy.

4. Definition of word count and word range.

Word count is defined as the number of words contained within the main body of the text which include:

- titles
- headings
- abstracts
- summaries
- in-text citations
- quotations
- footnotes

Items excluded from the word count are as follows:

- acknowledgements
- tables of contents
- a list of acronyms
- a glossary
- a list of tables, or figures
- bibliographies or list of references

Appendices will not normally be marked but they must not include material essential to the argument developed in the main body of the work.

Written assignments or assessments may be subject to either a word count or a word range limit. The purpose of a word count/range is part of the assessment itself – to ensure students can produce a piece of academic writing that conforms to the specifications of the assessment task. This will be specified in a module's briefing paper or Moodle page.

The word count or word range is regulated and is the responsibility of the module convenor for the module undertaken. Assessment word counts are set out in the module approval form and are approved as part of the periodic programme approval process.

The Institute of Ismaili Studies

Any amendments to assessment elements relating to word counts, subsequent to the initial setting, must be agreed through the process set out in the validation agreement between SOAS and the IIS.

Word counts

Where an assignment has a word count, the briefing paper and/or any briefing materials will indicate if an assessment is defined by word count specifically. A student will not exceed the given word count figure by a total of under or over 10% the given word count figure. This figure will include quotations, footnotes, titles, abstracts, summaries. Where a student exceeds the published word count above for an assessment, the assessment will be subject to a marks' penalty detailed below. Feedback will be provided on the assessment up to the limit of the word count.

Word Ranges

Where an assessment has a word range, the briefing paper and/or any briefing materials will indicate if an assessment is defined by word range specifically. The word range will be a figure that a student's assessed writing must fall within. Any word figure between the upper number and lower number of the word range will conform to the assessment criteria. This figure will include quotations, footnotes, titles, abstracts and summaries.

Items excluded from the word range are as follows: acknowledgements, tables of contents, a list of acronyms, a glossary, a list of tables, or figures. Appendices will not normally be marked but they must not include material essential to the argument developed in the main body of the work. Bibliographies are also not included in the word count.

Where a student exceeds the published word range above for an assessment, the assessment will be subject to a marks' penalty detailed below. Feedback will be provided on the assessment up to the limit of the word count.

5. Special provisions

Where work is expected to include significant amounts of non-textual content (e.g. musical or mathematical notation or linguistic structure diagrams), specific word count guidance will be provided for each assignment. Where work is expected to include the presentation of foreign language material with significant use of interlinear glosses and idiomatic translations, specific word count guidance will be provided for each assignment.

6. Penalties for over-length coursework.

Marks will be deducted for work that exceeds the prescribed word limit. The reduced mark will be entered onto the record of results on the student database. The deductions for over-length work are as follows:

The Institute of Ismaili Studies

Excess Length

More than 10% up to and including 20%
More than 20% up to and including 30%
More than 30%

Mark deduction

10 percentage points
15 percentage points
The work will be assigned a grade of 0.

7. Resubmission of coursework that has been subject to a penalty for being over-length and late

- 7.1 Over-length coursework for which the mark after penalty is the minimum pass mark or more may not be revised and resubmitted.
- 7.2 Over-length coursework for which the mark after penalty is less than the minimum pass mark may not be revised and resubmitted if the module for which it forms a part has been passed.
- 7.3 Normal resit requirements apply to over-length coursework for which the mark after penalty is less than the minimum pass mark and the module of which it forms a part has been failed overall.
- 7.4 Resubmission will be at the next available opportunity as outlined in the Taught Degree Regulations.
- 7.5 Capping of the overall mark for the module at the minimum pass mark will apply as appropriate.

8. Coursework subject to a penalty for being over-length and late

If coursework is over-length and submitted late, the deduction of marks for over-length work will be applied first and the penalty for late submission will be applied second. If, as a result, the coursework mark is less than the minimum pass mark then, if resubmission is permitted, the coursework must be on a new topic.