PROFILE

Associate Professor at The Institute of Ismaili Studies, London, where I have worked for two decades as researcher, teacher and editor. My published work runs from Fatimid and Alamūt-period Ismaili thought to the modern articulation of authority in the Persianate world. Since 2025 it has extended to the epistemology of generative artificial intelligence and what that technology does to interpretive judgement. I edit the Ismaili Heritage Series and advise the Encyclopaedia Iranica on Ismaili studies. I have run a full postgraduate module on Muslim intellectual traditions since 2012, directed the Institute's Introduction to Islam short course since 2017, and until 2026 headed a research unit of nine.

RESEARCH STRANDS

- Ismaili and Shī'ī intellectual history. Fatimid and Alamūt-period doctrine, cosmology and exegesis, with sustained work on al-Shahrastānī, al-Sijistānī, al-Kirmānī, Nāṣir-i Khusraw and Naṣīr al-Dīn al-Ṭūsī. Critical editions and annotated translations of Persian and Arabic primary texts.
- Authority, legitimacy and the Persianate world. The construction of religious and political authority without sovereign territory. Myths of sectarian violence and their transmission into modern political theory; Qājār and post-Qājār Iranian intellectual history; the Persianate as a category of analysis.
- Artificial intelligence, interpretive agency and digital humanities. The epistemic status of generative systems, read through Popperian critical rationalism and the Persianate hermeneutic tradition of ẓāhir, bāṭin and ta'wīl. Design research on systems that provoke reasoning instead of supplying conclusions.

RESEARCH LEADERSHIP

- Interim Head, Constituency Studies Unit, IIS, 2024–2026. Direction of a unit of nine researchers across three portfolios: biomedical ethics, contemporary questions facing Ismaili communities worldwide, and special projects commissioned by the Institute’s Board of Governors. Responsibility for work planning, research quality and reporting to the Board.
- Series Editor, Ismaili Heritage Series, IIS, 2020–present. Six years of editorial direction of one of the Institute’s flagship monograph series: commissioning, peer review, author development and production oversight.
- Director, Short Course on Islam, IIS, 2017–present. Design, staffing and delivery of a one-week intensive course recruiting participants from a wide range of professional and cultural backgrounds.
- Convenor, ‘Nizārī Ismailis and Spiritual Resurrection’, international conference, Aga Khan Centre, London, 2025.
- Convenor, ‘Ismaili Studies Conference: The State of the Field’, international conference, Aga Khan Centre, London, 2022. Proceedings under contract with Bloomsbury.
- Co-editor of two commissioned Bloomsbury volumes in progress, with Farhad Daftary and Omar Alí-de-Unzaga (see Publications).
- Advisory Board Member for Ismaili Studies, Encyclopaedia Iranica, 2025–present.
- Member, Research, Departmental Review and Academic Promotions Committee (RDRAPC), IIS, September 2024–present. Member, Academic Council, IIS.
- Senior internal peer reviewer for monographs in the Department of Academic Research, IIS. Full-cycle review from submission through written feedback to revision.
- Subject-matter expert of record on flagship taught programmes delivered under the Institute’s imprint, including ‘An Introduction to Islam’ (IIS and ITREB UK). Co-director of the jurisdictional course ‘(Re)Thinking and (Re)Living Islam Today’.
- Standing member, Jamati Programmes Committee, IIS, April 2024–February 2026. The committee through which the Institute coordinates its community-facing academic work with partner institutions.

RESEARCH IMPACT

- Google Scholar: just over one hundred citations, h-index 4, i10-index 2. Figures current to June 2026.
- Authority without Territory accounts for roughly sixty per cent of the total and remains the reference text on non-territorial religious authority in Ismaili institutional studies. Read against the size of the field, which supports a few dozen active scholars worldwide, the distribution reflects concentrated influence in a specialism.
- Command and Creation reviewed by Paul E. Walker in the Journal of the American Oriental Society. Persian translation published in Iran by Mīrāth-i Maktūb, 2023.

RESEARCH FUNDING AND COMPETITIVE SELECTION

- AHRC–SSHRC Artificial Intelligence Humanities Sandpit, Montréal, 17–19 February 2026. Selected by competitive international application: sixty-one scholars chosen from close to a thousand applicants. Three days of intensive interdisciplinary work across political philosophy, history, linguistics, literature, neuroscience, technology and research methodology. Nominated to receive an AHRC award for the resulting collaboration.
- GenQuery, collaborative design project arising from the AHRC–SSHRC sandpit, building a generative system that asks questions instead of supplying conclusions, guided by a humanities-grounded taxonomy of questioning moves. Co-investigator.
- Institutional research budgets held at IIS as Interim Head of the Constituency Studies Unit (2024–2026) and as Series Editor of the Ismaili Heritage Series (2020–present).

ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE AND DIGITAL HUMANITIES

- Book in preparation: Interpretive Agency in the Age of AI: Epistemology, Hermeneutics, and the Future of Human Reasoning. Argues that generative systems constitute a historically novel form of self-immunised knowledge production, and draws on the ta'wīl tradition for a vocabulary of interpretive agency that the dominant Western debate lacks.
- Co-authored article on interpretive technologies, with Professor Drew Hemment and others, under consideration at AI & Society.
- ‘The Mirror and the Mask: Methodological Mimicry in AI-Driven Islamic Studies’. Digital humanities event, IIS, London, 28 May 2026.
- Invited participant, AHRC–SSHRC Artificial Intelligence Humanities Sandpit, Montréal, February 2026.
- Two teaching sessions with secondary students on social media literacy and the ethical use of artificial intelligence. Edmonton, January 2026.

LANGUAGES

- Persian. Mother tongue; full professional proficiency. Language of research, lecturing, scholarly translation, editing and broadcast. Teaching and supervision offered in Persian.
- English. Native-level professional proficiency. Language of all teaching, publication, supervision and examining since 2005.
- Arabic. Professional reading proficiency. Working knowledge of classical Arabic sufficient for scholarly translation and textual criticism, demonstrated in the edition and translation of al-Shahrastānī and in the Encyclopaedia Islamica translation programme.
- French. Basic reading knowledge.
